The American Studies Collaboratory

Calling for Faculty Participation!

_How do we work at the edges of our expertise and rediscover curiosity, play, and invention?_

Welcome to The American Studies Collaboratory, a new research initiative where speculation drives critical thinking and intellectual life thrives across boundaries. We cordially invite you to join other faculty, graduate and undergraduate students, artists, community organizers, and media makers, in a series of experimental collaborations.

***

On May 2-4, 2018, please join the first module in this collective experiment, Col(LAB) 1.0 _Food Matters: Risk and Privilege._

Led by a team of cross disciplinary Principle Investigators --

- Allison Carruth, Associate Professor of English and Society and Genetics and Director of the Laboratory for Environmental Narrative Strategies, UCLA
- Angela Creager, Thomas M. Siebel Professor in the History of Science
- Chris Lentz, Food & Agriculture Initiative, Campus Dining --

Col(LAB) 1.0 explores the tension and interdependence between _risk_ and _privilege_ when it comes to our food systems and food culture at the multiple and intersecting levels of production, consumption, sustainability, and human choice/constraint.

For more information, please visit our website: https://ams.princeton.edu/collab/collab-10-food-matters

Sign Up Now!

Please send email to jferszt@princeton indicating your interest

Sponsored by the Program in American Studies, CST StudioLab, and Princeton Food and Agriculture Initiative